

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A method for outputting signals from dark reference pixels, the method includes the steps of transferring signals from dark reference pixels that are shielded from light to a plurality of storage circuit elements; and transferring
5 signals substantially simultaneously from each of the plurality of storage circuit elements to an operational amplifier on one clock cycle which operational amplifier averages all the signals from the sample and hold circuits for providing an approximate average dark reference signal.